The bonds had never been issued because, at the time they were authorized, Richmond city bonds were selling at a low figure, and it was deemed advisable not to put them upon the market until better terms could be realized. Until this year it has been the custom for the balances of bonded appropriations to be carried forward, and the ordinance providing that all such balances must revert to the treasury passed this year, is the cause of the present complication.

NO COMPULSORY EDUCATION. We are gratified to know that the Virginia school superintendents promptly and emphatically dismissed the proposition to petition the Legislature to enact a law providing for compulsory education in this State. The position of The Times on this question is well known. We believe in education, and we would in every way encourage the people of Virginia to send their children to school. Indeed, we cannot understand how, in this enlightened age, any man who loves his child can be indifferent to the child's education, and can neglect the opportunity which is freely offered him by the State to give his child a good common school education. But when it comes to the question of compulsion, we draw the line. We resist with our might every proposition which looks to encroachment on the rights of the people by the government. We stand always for American manhood and individual liberty. That is the foundation stone of the American republic, and when that is removed the republic will totter and fail. Every man should be master and lord supreme in his ernment interferes and presumes to dictate to him as to how he should control rectly diagnosed the international freak. own household, and whenever the Govhis family, whenever the Government presumes to take out of his hands the absolute control of his children, the Government commits an outrage against manhood and liberty.

We are glad that this question was introduced in the meeting of the superintendents, for it gave them the opportunity to show the stuff of which Virginians are made. The proposition was not seriously considered, and the speeches that were made in opposition to it demonstrated the fact, if it needed demonstration, that the spirit of liberty in this old Commonwealth is as healthy and vigorous and the State. The people at large stand upon the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights, and while they bow to the law and uphold the majesty of the law within proper limits, they draw the line at the household, and whenever the law presumes to make encroachments thereon, the people rise up in their majesty and say "thus far shalt thou go, and no

DR. CURRY ON MANUAL SCHOOLS. Dr. J. L. M. Curry has nobly fortified the position of The Times on the ques tion of industrial education for the South. In his able address night-before-last before the school superintendents of Virginia, he emphasized the importance of manual schools for boys and girls that they may be taught how to earn a live-Bhood. He referred to the workingman who makes $6 a day as compared with the workingman who makes 75 cents a a difference of education. The one was an expert and the other uneducated. There are many people out of employment at this day, but they are not the experts. You may find an exception here tried. end there, but, as a rule, the man who knows how to do some one thing well is almost sure of steady employment at living wages. Dr. Curry gave the people of Richmond something to think about when he said that the proposition to introduce manual education in the public schools of the city was met with the reply "that the city was too poor." "The city," said Dr. Curry, "is too poor not to do it."

That the South is lacking in manual and industrial schools is a melancholy fact, and is attested by the further fact that the South is lacking in expert mechanics. The South cannot hope to make great strides in industrial growth so long as she must import her expert mechanics. She has abundant material and she can make expert manufacturers and from workers as well as she can produce cotton and iron. It is simply a question in and the South, has as good material as any section. Moreover it is far better for the South that her own people should be employed in conducting such enterprises. They are better adapted to the climate and conditions generally, and they understand better than Northern men how to deal with Southern working peqple. Bishop Potter declared the other d a that the employer looks down upon his employes. That, as we have previously remarked, is not true of the South. The Northern capitalists and the Northern foremen do have a high and mighty way of dealing with their subordinates which does not take in the South. Therefore, we say that Southern foremen are the men for Southern work-ships. It is very clear, therefore, from these premises, that in educating the boys and girls of the South to be expert working people, the South is not only giving its young people the ways and means of earning a livelihood, but is also doing that which is best calculated to build up her industries. Mechanical education is a living question, and, in our opinion, there is no question of the age of more importance to the Southern people than this. Let us have, as soon as possible, as many as possible institutions, which shall educate the boys and girls of the land in the practical affairs of life. Thus shall we build up a steady yeomanry, and promote the industrial development of the South.

CHAMP CLARK HITS THEM AGAIN. We have more than once remarked upon the rugged and homely, but pointed humor of Missouri's wild and woolly member of the House of Representatives, Champ Clark. It is truly a pity that a man of so much genuis as he has should connect himself with free silver and the other delusions that he advocates. On Thursday last Mr. Clark got in some of his most effective work against the Republicans. Remarking upon the Republicans of the House having put hides upon the free list, while the Republicans of the Senate put a heavy duty upon them, he wittily added that the Democrats would put Republicans hides upon the fence in 1898. But Mr. Clark must go slow. There is a way to hang Republican hides upon the fence in 1838 and in 1900, but it is not by pursuing Mr. Clark's paths. Free silver will not put them there. But if Mr. Clark and his fellow Democrats who went astray at Chicago wil abandon free silver, Populism, and the other theories of the Chicago platform and plant themselves squarely upon a fixed and unvarying standard of value with an abundance of the money that the people need through will have the pleasure of seeing the Republican hide hanging on the fence, and it will hang there indefinitely too.

All sensible men who study the condition of the country concede to Mr. Clark and those who work with him a great deal of what they say. They admit that the agriculturists of a great part of the nation are destitute of any media of exchange and that they have the right to complain in the most serious manner of the injustice of the laws that subject them to what they have to endure. But those same sensible men are forced to say to the farmers, when they come forward with a demand that the government shall coin an indefinite number of silver dollars worth only fifty cents each. that such a scheme of relief is impossible. That this, instead of relieving the farmers would seriously injure them.

Mr. Clark very well added to what we have quoted that the Republican party was sending three men abroad on a wild goose chase (the commissioners to an international silver conference) to tide them over this fall's elections and that they would provide for a Currency Commission in the hope of tiding them over the election of 1898.

and the Republican party most probably has no more serious purpose in the proposed Currency Commission than to make a political point.

But if the Republicans in Congress will only pass a bill providing for such a commission, and if the President will only appoint proper commissioners, then the result of that commission may be of far greater importance than Mr. Clark supposes. It is perfectly clear that the public is beginning to realize that there is a very serious and a very just complaint in our population concerning currency conditions, and that that complaint has its location with the farmers. We meet every day with men who, a year or two back, hooted at the idea of our returning to state banks, but who now concede that it is absolutely essential we should do so to satisfy the country people. If the President has learned as much as the citizens we meet, he will, in appointing a Currency Commission, give a strong representation to the farming element. and, if he does that, appointing those only who understand the needs of the farmers, but who also understand the necessity of standing inviolably by the single gold standard, then we may have a report from the Currency Commission that will bring about such an amendment of car laws as will satisfy the farm-

If the President will keep this idea standing before his mind in appointing a Currency Commission, he may pacify the country and leave his office with the credit of having done something for the relief of the people. But, of course, if he is to be animated by the small view Mr. Clark attributes to his party, then the Currency Commission will be as complete a failure as any other of the nostrums that have been

MR. BACON'S RESOLUTION.

The resolution which Mr. Bacon, of Georgia, introduced into the Senate on is opposed to war and favors settling all differences with other governments by international arbitration, ought to be adopted by the Senate. This is a particularly favorable time for adopting it. The Senate has just refused to ratify the Anglo-American treaty of arbitration and the world is liable to draw the inference from that fact that we are a quarreisome people looking for difficulties with other nations. No greater injustice could be done the American people than such a conclusion..

Our people are conservative and inclined to peace above all things, and it would be a cruel wrong to them for the impression to go out amongst mankind that they are ill-tempered and quarrel-

The world knows that our :esources

are almost boundless and that if it should come necessary for us to go to war, the human imagination is inadequate to figuring the limits of the effort we could make. There is no reason, therefore, that we shall not make public proclamation of our pacific disposition. We have the strength of a giant, and nothing shows a giant off to such advantage as an exhibition by him of good nature and an aversion to any condition that might require him to make others the victim

This is a good time for passing Mr. Bacon's resolution and we hope the Senate will pass it by a unanimous vote.

OUR MUSIC FEAST.

We congratulate the Wednesday Club of Richmond on its splendid achievement. It has given to the community perhaps the most delightful music feast it has ever enjoyed. It has also demonstrated the fact that it is a working club. No organization can make such delightful music as the Wednesday Club makes without the most careful study. The club has given us a fine exhibition of its skill, and while we were all delightfully entertained, we were not unmindful of the work and training that were necessary to make such an exhibition. The visiting artists and the orchestra also contributed their full share to the feast, and we are pleased to know that the visiting soloists were quite as much pleased with the chorus as the chorus was with them, which is to say a great deal.

There is no longer a question as to the status of the Wednesday Club in this community. It is an institution thoroughly established, and it will go on to greater triumphs until it has transformed Richmend into one of the great musical centres of the country. That is the ambition of the Wednesday Club, and to this end will it work. More than that, we believe that it will be sustained by the com-

New York, although it has recently attained the distinction of being the second ity in the universe, has not grown se great as to stop exerting itself for business. On the contrary, we note that a meeting of the Wholesale Merchants' Asociation was held on Tuesday last to devise means for promoting trade. Among the various projects suggested was a conference with railroad officials with the view of obtaining reduced rates for persons who may desire to visit New York for shopping purposes. In other words, the great city of New York has adopted the "shoppers' excursion" idea which Richmond originated a year ago, and which she has so recently abandoned. It is an interesting coincidence, surely, that New York should have taken up with this project in the same week that Richmond ran its last shopping excursion. There may be something in this for Rich mond to think over.

jail of the District of Columbia. They received the notice yesterday from Prosecuting Attorney Davis, of the District of Columbia, informing them that they will have to put in an appearance on May 17 and be tried for contempt of the United States Senate.

These two distinguished millionaires do not seem to be a bit ruffled over the prospect of a sojourn behind the bars, and all arrangements have been made for dwelling in luxurious comfort if the wielders of the law determine that they must go to jail. They intend to have cious witness, Chapman, and Prosecuting Attorney Davis is confident that such will be the outcome of the trial.

The case of Havemeyer and Searles is a parallel one with that of Broker Elverton R. Chapman, who was taken before the United States Senate investigating committee and ineffectually questioned as to the contributions made to as, nevertheless, a local affair and none the business of the United States tain questions. The case was appealed, but the United States Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the lower court, and Chapman went to jail.

So it is thought that the notice to Have-tion for them to go to Washington and abide by the same result.

Stuck to His Post.

HOUGHTON, MICH. May 7.—With a box containing 200 pounds of dynamite on fire, tea feet away from him, John Thomas, a boy who runs the compressed air hoisting engine in the Tamarack mine, stuck to his post and saved the lives of the men at work in the mine by his wonderful bravery.

Ten seconds after Thomas had hoisted the men to the level, the dynamite exploded, smashing the engine to pieces and doing other damage, but the men and the boy to whom they owe their lives were in a place of safety.

The miners were working in the twenty-third level and had put seven cases of dynamite in a box for future use. At noon a miner, accompanied by Thomas, went to his post, gave the
